The thing that matters about June

Reach came down from May — but every metric we own went up: +18.5K new followers, higher engagement rates on LinkedIn and X, profile visits climbing. May bought reach; June converted it into a permanent audience.

Honestly: the miss of the quarter — 21.6K average vs. a 40K target. What changed: mid-quarter we replaced volume (119 posts/month) with a lean, curated agency model. The response was immediate: a third of the posts, 3x May's impressions, 10x efficiency per post, and the best follower month of the quarter. Q3 = scale what June proved.

Why it matters: YouTube is the long-form authority platform — where a founder story compounds for years, feeds search and AI answers, and turns viral short-form viewers into a deep audience. Launched with the strongest possible opening story: the exit.

How to read this

Each platform plays a different role in the funnel: Facebook generates mass awareness (US 47%, broad audience), Instagram converts it into a young global business audience with New York as its #1 city, and LinkedIn holds the audience that matters most — 28% founders and CEOs, three-quarters decision-makers, spread across Tel Aviv, New York, Miami and London. The brand is building width and depth at the same time.

- Lior's personal website — live. The first owned asset outside the platforms.
- Nasdaq Tower billboard, Times Square — booked, going live July 29. A brand moment that seeds a full Q3 content campaign.
- YouTube channel launched — first long-form video live: "Everything I learned from selling my company to Fiverr". Opens the long-form authority lane.
- Brand strategy V8 + Visual Identity — approved and adopted: archetype, ICP, writing principles and a unified content mix across all platforms.
- Facebook scaled from ~4K to 72K followers — the channel existed but was dormant; this quarter it broke out and joined the reporting as a core reach layer.
- Content & learning system — automated mirroring to secondary channels (Bluesky, Threads), daily performance logging, and a weekly loop that feeds next week's content.

Q3 Proposal — Based on What the Quarter Taught Us

Platform	Baseline (June)	Commit / month	Stretch / month	Follower / month

Facebook	3.25M*	2.5M	6.0M	+8K

LinkedIn	52K	55K	120K	+900

Platform	Baseline (June)	Commit / month	Stretch / month	Followers / month
Total	6.1M	4.5M+ / month	9M+	+12K/mo → 190K+ total by Sep 30

* Under an active profile restriction (appeal in progress). Commits are floors built on June — the one month of Q2 with no viral hit and an active restriction. Consistency beats a peak: 4.5M+ every month = 13.5M+ for the quarter, 5.6x the previous target, defensible with zero virals. Stretch reflects a month with one viral — any viral, restriction lift, or billboard halo puts us ahead of plan.

Q3 focus

- AI-generated videos — new lane launching in Q3: script → AI avatar/voice → publish on IG and TikTok, with a quality bar of 8K+ average views per AI reel
- Scale the collab motion: the "Money Updates" (עדכוני הכסף) collabs drove significant traffic — find international equivalents and run more of them
- More content, more Trial Reels: increase overall publishing volume and use IG Trial Reels to test with non-followers before full release
- Nasdaq billboard (Jul 29) — a cross-platform content campaign around the moment
- 2-year exit anniversary — anchor post using the proven format (200K+ last time)
- YouTube — establish a long-form cadence off the launch video
- Brand Book — complete and roll out

Course corrections

- Facebook: appeal the restriction + reduce automation pace until it clears
- X: scale the agency model June validated — quality over volume
- LinkedIn: 1–2 weekly AI-newsjack slots + personal stories for conversion
- Podcasts: target Tier-1 international (English) shows — one recorded appearance in Q3; keep declining off-focus Hebrew inbound
